How Miracle Flights Help Us Roll With My Son's Rare Disease

I remember hanging on to the toes of my mother as she died. Her battle with cancer was coming to an end and I felt the need to tell her who all was in the room. My voice was close to a yell. "Dad's here,

Trending at ASK: Understanding the Endrew F. Supreme Court Case

IN*SOURCE (the Indiana Resource Center for Families with Special Needs) has provided a toolkit to help you better understand this landmark decision.

Paw Paw's here, Me Maw's here and I'm here!" I went on to tell my mother that it was OK. That she could go. I was 22 years old and I was granting my mother permission to die. Like what I said had any effect on how things were going to play out that day. I had no control. I was just rolling with it.

Fast forward 14 years later, as I sat on edge of a hospital chair listening to the doctor say that my child, Levi, was probably going to die. He was only 8 days old. I did everything right during my pregnancy. How could this be happening to us? I do not remember much from that day after the doctor talked to us. I zoned out shortly after he said, "...if this is the case, there is nothing we can do."

What do you mean, nothing you can do? You are a doctor! Doctors fix patients. I don't know if this did not sit well with me because I was a nurse or because I was a mother. But either way, my husband, a registered respiratory therapist, and I went home and did research on what they thought Levi had. We talked about it and decided together. If this is what he has, he is going to die at home with us and his sisters. The ball was officially back in our court as we rolled with it.
